Blow To National Religious Party

Soloveitchik Bows Out Of Chief Rabbinate Race

JERUSALEM (P.O.) — Rabbi Joseph B. Soloveitchik of Boston withdrew his candidacy as Ashkenazi Chief Rabbi of Israel because of the political turmoil that had surrounded the campaign.

Soloveitchik told The POST and OPINION that his decision "was final." There were reports that Soloveitchik might be persuaded to change his mind.

The Boston scholar said the Israel Government should not interfere in the election of a Chief Rabbi. He said the Government in setting ground rules for the selection "infringed on the spiritual nature of the Chief Rabbinate position which is beyond and above the Government."

The Boston rabbi's move was viewed by the Jerusalem Post as the latest blow at the National Religious Party's effort to "control Jewish religious life in Israel."

National Religious Party leaders who had backed Soloveitchik's candidacy assumed that Rabbi Shlomo Goren Chief Chaplain of the Israel Army would withdraw in deference to the renowned Boston scholar.

GOREN A brilliant young scholar and paratroop-jumping chaplain is favored by Premier Ben Gurion and by the majority of Israel's younger religious generation. Israeli younger religious elements believe Goren could take the Chief Rabbinate out of the murky of politics and give the post dignity.

What these National Religious party leaders fear — and — rightly is that as they lose control of the Israel's supreme religious institutions, they will also lose control of the appointments on which much of their political support is based, the Jerusalem Post commented.

BY HUGGING political power too closely, the self-appointed bearers of the "Crown of Torah" in Jewry, they had overlooked their pastoral job, the Jerusalem Post declared.

Instead of serving as the conscience of the Zionist movement and then of the State of Israel, the National Religious Party has continued to "heap discredit upon themselves" by becoming too involved in politics, the paper said.

The Jerusalem Post said that there is every indication that the National Religious Party and the N.R.P. — dominated Chief Rabbinate — will lose the struggle for the religious leadership of the Israel Jewish community which is fast approaching a climax.

IN AN attempt to cool the hot passions of the election for a new Chief Rabbi, the election was put off for five months by the Cabinet.

National Religious Party leaders wanted a one-year postponement, in order to have more time to persuade Soloveitchik to stand for the Chief Rabbinate post.

Soloveitchik in his letter to Moshe Shapiro, Israel's Minister of Interior, announcing his decision to step out of the race said:

"I HAD HOPED . . . that I would be able to differentiate between the spiritual ideals and the technical and political needs of (the Chief Rabbinate) . . . and that I would be able to devote my time and energy to the propagation of Torah and the knowledge of God . . . but the . . . political turmoil which has recently surrounded the Chief Rabbinate election campaign . . . has convinced me that all my hopes were merely a phantasy incapable of realization."

Boston sources report that Premier Ben Gurion may meet with Soloveitchik next week.

Girls Show Less Bias Than Boys

WASHINGTON (P.O.) — An analysis of youth attitudes sponsored by the National Organization of Women for Equality revealed that girls generally show more liberal attitudes on racial issues than boys, and that a majority of those youngsters who favored discrimination also favored restrictions against civil liberties including bars against freedom of speech.

The survey, conducted under direction from Purdue University, shows "that a disturbingly large minority of American high school students (about 35 per cent nationwide with larger numbers in the South) lack understanding or appreciation of democratic principles."

Jewish Leaders Split Over Creation of Organization To Distribute UJA Money

By GERSHON JACOBSON

New York Bureau Chief

NEW YORK (P.O.) — Jewish leaders this week were locked in a struggle for power which would decide who will control disbursement of money raised by American Jewry.

The key issue in negotiations (P.O., Feb. 12-19-26) was the creation of a new Jewish organization which will succeed the Jewish Agency for Palestine in the U. S.

The United Jewish Appeal negotiators, consisting of William Rosenwald, Morris Berinstein, Joseph Meyerhoff and Max Fisher, were at odds with the four representing the Jewish Agency over the composition of the board of the new body.

The new body will likely be called The United Israel Appeal.

The board of the new body is to consist of 21 members, seven from the United Jewish Appeal, seven from the Jewish Agency, and seven others. It is over the choice of these last seven that the negotiations seem to be deadlocked at this point.

The UJA wants the right to name these seven also, contending that if the Agency names these seven it will control the new body.

The negotiations have proceeded to the point however, where it has been determined that one administrator will control the spending of funds in the U. S. Jewish community for foreign relief.

Since this representative will most likely be the strongest individual in the new set up, both the Jewish Agency and the UJA want to be in a position to name him.

The four Jewish Agency representatives negotiating with the UJA quartet are Dr. Nahum Goldmann, Zalman Shazar, Rose Halpern and Emanuel Neuman. Inside observers pointed out that the Jewish Agency did not expect the determined stand of the UJA negotiators.

The provisional head of the new body will most likely be Dr. Goldmann, who is now chairman of the Jewish Agency. However, depending on the composition of the new board, the chances are that Dr. Goldmann's powers will be seriously curtailed.

The discussions are also taking up the problem of financing of the educational and propaganda work now being carried on in the U.S. by the Jewish Agency.

Here the UJA is taking the stand that these activities should be ended "because American Jews are giving their money to rescue work only, and nothing else."

Some observers attach importance to the impending visit of Prime Minister Ben-Gurion to the U. S. this coming week. He is known to favor the UJA position as against that of the Jewish Agency.

For the first time since the negotiations started, Goldmann, on his own initiative called in Irving Kane and Philip Bernstein, president and executive director of the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds, for a briefing. The session with the two was held Monday.

Mud-Slinging Marks Stein's Farewell Testimonial Dinner

PHILADELPHIA (P.O.) — Mud-slinging and unrestrained name calling marked the farewell testimonial dinner for Dr. Sol Stein, executive director of the Jewish National Fund here.

The verbal fireworks took place between JNF and Histadrut officials. Stein became national director of the Histadrut this week.

Israel Histadrut campaign officials were called "pirates and robbers" by Mendel N. Fisher, national director of the JNF, the Philadelphia Jewish Times reported.

Fisher, in addressing the audience, called Isaac Hamlin and Israel Stolarsky "pirates who have come here to collect their dividends. They lured Dr. Stein away from us and now they sit here like smug thieves." In conclusion, Fisher shouted from the podium,

Fisher

"We'll see if the Histadrut shall give you a dinner as big as the one tonight," the Philadelphia Jewish Times reported.

Hamlin is the American Histadrut representative in Israel. Stolarsky is assistant national secretary of the Histadrut Campaign.

RABBI JACOB J. Weinstein, national chairman of the National Committee for Labor Israel and the Israel Histadrut Campaign called Stein's appointment as "lend-lease."

William H. Sylk, president of the JNF Foundation answered: "I always thought that when you borrow something you give it back. I'm sure you (the Histadrut) will not return Dr. Stein to us."

STEIN WHO has served the JNF for a quarter of a century said he wanted "a broader horizon." He said, "Unfortunately, the Jewish National Fund did not offer me this opportunity."

State Department Denies 'Gentlemen's Agreements'

By LILLIAN LEVY

Washington Bureau Chief

WASHINGTON (P.O.) — The State Department has denied the existence of a "Gentlemen's Agreement" allowing discrimination against American nationals of Jewish faith by Saudi Arabia and Pakistan.

Lincoln White, State Department Press Officer said, "The United States government has made no arrangement with Saudi Arabia which would deny American service men of Jewish faith entry to Saudi Arabia." He acknowledged, however, that the agreement which grants the U.S. certain operational facilities at Dhahran Air Base, "of considerable importance to our national security," stipulates that all American personnel assigned must be in possession of Saudi Arabian visas. "The Saudi Arabia government . . . has normally refused to issue visas to persons of Jewish faith irrespective of nationality," said White.

The State Department denial of the alleged "Gentlemen's Agreement" was prompted by news accounts of a resolution by the American Jewish Congress calling for investigation of reports that such an agreement does, in fact, exist between the U.S. and Saudi Arabia, and Pakistan. In denying that discrimination is practiced by Pakistan, Lincoln White said, "The government of Pakistan has not discriminated in any way against American citizens because of race or religion and such considerations play no part in the selection of American personnel to staff U.S. government offices in Pakistan." It happens that among those assigned to Pakistan are several Americans of Jewish faith, according to White.

Ben-Gurion May Talk With Ike

WASHINGTON (P.O.) — David Ben-Gurion, who is coming to the United States next week to receive an honorary degree from Brandeis University, is expected to come to Washington, according to the State Department.

Referring to BG's coming, State Department Press Officer Lincoln White said, "We understand that Prime Minister Ben-Gurion is making a private visit to the United States to receive an honorary degree at Brandeis on Mar. 9. During the course of this visit, he expects to come to Washington. He will, of course, be welcome."

No official appointments have, as yet, been set for Israel's leading statesman, either by the Department of State or the White House. Asked by the POST and OPINION about any White House plans to receive the Prime Minister, Anne Wheaton, Assistant White House Press Secretary said, "I believe it is under consideration."

30,000,000 Movie Tickets Sold Annually in Israel

By CARL ALPERT

HAIFA — The motion picture theaters of the country, cinemas as they are called here, are involved in an interesting controversy centering around the news reels which they show. The issue is certainly not one of the pressing economic, social or military problems which face Israel, but considering that some 30,000,000 cinema tickets are sold each year, the affair is obviously of interest to every man, woman and child in Israel.

THE GOVERNMENT has been trying to encourage the local film industry. A couple of good pictures, made locally, can be a great source of income for the country. If Jews can do it in Hollywood, why not in Herzlia? And so a law is in effect which requires every motion picture house to show a locally produced newsreel at least once a week. This is supposed to give the motion picture producers some kind of assured income, while they are gambling with the larger, speculative aspects of feature films for export.

Things have not worked out the way the government had expected. The fees paid by the theaters are not sufficient to cover even the cost of production. There are only 200 cinema houses in the country, and most of these are located in small villages and settlements, from which little income can be expected.

THUS IT IS that the producers have found another source of income. Within the framework of their ten minute newsreel they include some two minutes of unabashed advertising matter. Quickie flashes will take the captive audience through a modern food packaging plant, whose name is very prominently displayed, or will depict cleverly the advantages of a brand of cigarettes over its competitor. The producers have found that the income from this source is more than twice what they receive from the theaters.

Further, they have developed the fine art of hidden advertising. The dedication exercises of an important institution can have good public relations value for the institution, and discreet fees are paid to ensure proper newsreel coverage. A distinguished visitor goes through a factory? Surely that is an important event, and if the identity of the plant is not kept secret, that must be worth some thing.

The results, naturally, has been a lowering of the standards of the newsreel. Audiences become restless and dissatisfied. But the cinema owners have suddenly woken up to realization of the fact that they are paying good money for the privilege of promoting general advertising from which others benefit. Pay for the newsreels? They now demand a cut of the advertising profits!

MOST OF the movie houses in the big cities are already deriving an income from flashing on the screen advertising slides of local business houses. Indeed, I have heard reports that movie advertising is in some quarters considered the most effective way of reaching the Israeli public. Remember — there is no television here. There are more than twenty daily newspapers, in a dozen different languages. But everybody goes to the movies.

Every possible source of income must be exploited. And so it is that the cinema break the feature film — usually at a most exciting point — to declare a ten minute intermission. The lights go up, the audience can stretch, but the important thing is that candy, ice cream, cold drinks, etc. are offered for sale up and down the aisles. After all appetites have been satisfied, the movie resumes.

Thirty million tickets a year. What is going to happen to this lucrative business when television comes to Israel remains to be seen, but the cinema owners are already in the forefront of those opposing introduction of TV.

B-G Says Arabs Are Bluffing

LONDON (P-O) — Premier Ben Gurion told a London Sunday Times correspondent that he believed the anti-Israel threats of Nasser and the Arab League were strictly bluffing. "But if they really intend to attack us, let them try," he said.

Ben Gurion said he doubted the genuineness of the League's threats to compel Israel to abandon her plan for utilizing part of the waters of the River Jordan for irrigation.

He said settlement of the Negev was impossible without the Jordan waters.

Only 7% of Jews Intermarry But Figure Could Rise to 20%

By STUART DIM

NEW YORK (P-O) — Only seven Jews out of 100 marry a non-Jew today. But tomorrow the figure could rise to 20 out of 100.

"A prediction of 15 or 20 per cent seems high. But if it is correct, it shows an amazingly high degree of in-marriage (marriage of Jew to Jew) — in fact, the highest rate ever attained by a white minority group," said Dr. Ruby Jo Reeves Kennedy of the Department of Sociology at Connecticut College.

Dr. Kennedy made her comments at the Conference on Intermarriage and Jewish Life at the Herzl Institute.

Dr. Kennedy emphasized that when the number of available mates in a community is small, intermarriage possibilities increase.

For example, the highest rate of intermarriage in the United States is in Iowa, where Jews are only one per cent of the total population.

"THE JEWS have assimilated and blended almost completely into all aspects of American culture. Except, they indicate a marked preference for marriages within the group," she said.

This preference is "vigorously sanctioned and reinforced by practices of the Jewish family, which is highly integrated," philosophically and religiously, she said.

Bonn Cabinet Takes Up Israel Relations

BONN (P-O)—Chancellor Konrad Adenauer is planning to place the question of establishment of diplomatic relations with Israel before the West German cabinet early this month.

The question has become a major topic of discussion in Bonn, following the recommendation of Social Democratic Deputy Carlo Schmid that diplomatic ties be established between the Bonn Government and Israel.

"Ritual," she said, "serves to promote" in-marriage and "cohesiveness of the family unit."

"Jewish men intermarry more than Jewish women," stated Dr. Nathan Goldberg, professor of sociology at Yeshiva University. "Intermarriage is a result of changing cultural values and ideas."

He explained why he thought Jewish boys intermarry more than Jewish girls:

(1) The man's role is different from the women's in society. He comes in contact with more non-Jews.

(2) More Jewish men than women go to college and make contact with the non-Jew.

(3) Males are expected to "propose and are marriage initiators."

(4) Some Jews believe non-Jews make better wives and husbands.

The individual himself has a lot to do with intermarriage rates, he said. Some children purposely intermarry to "spite overprotective mothers and fathers," he said. The "exhibitionist" Jewish child marries to attract attention, while others intermarry to climb social ladders.

But there are counter forces to intermarriage that tend to hold down the rates. The attitude of the non-Jew, who doesn't want to marry a Jew, is very important, said Dr. Goldberg.

"Jewish education leads to group identification," he noted. "When communities establish centers, young Jews tend to stay in the community." He said the problem of children is very important in holding down the number of intermarriages.

Dr. Erich Rosenthal, a Queens College sociology professor said: "Jewish intermarriages will increase because of continued secularization and acculturation." The United States, he explained, has been very successful in "Americanizing foreign cultures." He called public schools the "Agent of Americanization." All things, he said, "point to an increasing intermarriage rate."

Scuffled on Street

Drop Charges Against Jewish Leader and Neo-Nazi

WASHINGTON (P-O) — The case involving disorderly conduct charges against a local Jewish communal leader and a neo-Nazi who were arrested after scuffling over distribution of hate handbills was dropped.

The American Civil Liberties Union involved itself in the case by seeking to incriminate Irving Berman, 48, with "interfering with free speech." The northern Virginia leader of the Israel Bond drive tried to prevent Kenneth Morgan, 34, henchman of hate monger George Lincoln Rockwell from distributing handbills calling for the gassing of American Jewry.

New Hepburn Movie Revolves Around Love Story Between German and Israeli

By EPHRAIM KATZ

NEW YORK (P-O) — Audrey Hepburn will star in a strange love story between an Israeli girl and a German man, planned for filming in Tel Aviv, London and Berlin.

The story begins with a chance meeting in England of the Israeli girl and the German, which soon flourishes into a love affair. But when the girl discovers her lover's nationality, she leaves him in disgust and returns to Israel. Determined to win her back, the man follows her. By the time the film ends, they are reunited in Israel, forgetting the bitter past and hoping together for a better future.

Jail Ex-Con For Abusing Jewish Chilean Envoy

NEW YORK (P-O) — Police arrested a mentally disturbed ex-con charging him with robbing Daniel Schweitzer, Chilean UN delegate.

Three hoods recently broke into Schweitzer's New York apartment and demanded to know if he was Jewish. When he said he was, they forced him to give a Nazi salute and shout "Hell Hitler." He then was robbed.

Sammy Davis Jr. Found Inner Peace Through Conversion to Judaism

By TRUDE FELDMAN

NEW YORK (P.O.) — It all happened at Madison Square Garden when Sammy Davis Jr., was entertaining for the America-Israel Cultural Foundation.

When this guest star concluded ed his performance, all of his fans ran to him and I heard one yelling, "Sammy, will you please sign my autograph book in Hebrew?"

"I'll be glad to, if someone'll teach me how to write 'Shmuel' in Hebrew."

As a Hebrew teacher, I volunteered on the spot, and then, the thought suddenly occurred to me that this versatile entertainer had converted to Judaism five years ago.

After all the fanfare, publicity and to-do, my curiosity was deepened.

At a New York hotel I talked with him for many hours, amid a bedlam of telephone calls, schedules, rehearsals, etc.

As an Orthodox rabbi's daughter, sister, niece, sister-in-law, and granddaughter, I was born into the Jewish religion and steeped in its many facets as I grew up. Yet, I was in a quandary as to the need for Sammy Davis Jr. to change his faith.

Is he still as sincere and as deeply interested as when he originally was motivated to convert? How has it affected him? These and many other questions intrigued me.

Despite the fact that he is a top star, he had been troubled of mind and spirit.

"I was confused and looking; but, I didn't know for what. I wanted something morally tangible and I kept seeking. One day I realized it was religion. In this wacky, mixed-up world of show business, money and success, we lose all contact and strength and forget obligations to our fellow man and then we wake up suddenly and say, 'wait a minute, I gotta get hold of myself,' he told me.

The idea of converting occurred to Sammy Davis before his accident in 1954 in which he lost his eye.

Sammy was beginning to find faith — yet, he needed more and more strength.

It was at the Fairmount Hotel in San Francisco at a children's charity at which he was performing.

"I love to entertain for kids — they take to me and I really am good with them," he said, as When's The Bar Mitzva?

Sammy Davis Jr., with Hebrew Teacher, Trude Feldman, daughter of Rabbi Moses J. Feldman, of Los Angeles, who is teaching the "Ha-Sefer" (Hebrew Primer).

he fingered his Mogen David (star of David).

After a benefit in San Francisco, he happened to talk with a young, handsome man, who turned out to be a Reform rabbi.

The casual conversation developed into a deep soul-searching experience. His curiosity about Judaism was set aflame.

"Simultaneously, the rabbi and I talked at length on Judaism and its meaning. It was surprisingly complete and satisfying. He showed me around the temple and explained the details of the House of Worship. I felt that the Jewish faith has a basic simplicity and a refreshing freedom.

The more I studied it the more

I liked it."

His enthusiasm for his new religion has been unabated thru the years and his desire to learn more and more increases with time.

He found what he was seeking — a way of life — Judaism — which brought him strength.

"I am extremely anxious to get to Israel, entertain there, help them out in any way. I must go and see the country and meet the people—this, I shall consider one of the high lights of my life," the fabulous entertainer said.

"I have learned a lot of Jewish history, but not enough. I know I must also learn a lot in Israel."

Would Publication of Jewish Marriage Failures Deter Divorce?

ATLANTA (P-O) — Should Jewish newspapers run a regular column on Jewish divorces?

Ben Aronin, noted Chicago attorney and author, said here they should.

Such a column, published alongside engagements, weddings, births, obituaries would deter their frequency, Aronin said, the Southern Israelite reports.

ARONIN SAID that the Shammai stated that only adultery was grounds for a divorce and that the mere act of adultery was sufficient to dissolve a holy marriage.

Rabbi Jacob Rothschild of Atlanta recalled that Hillel had once said that "burnt soup" was sufficient grounds to break up a marriage.

Rothschild declared that when things had advanced to such a state where burnt soup could seem so important, any reason was reason enough since the parties had already reached the impasse where only a "Get" or Jewish divorce could be the answer.

THEY BOTH agreed there were fewer divorces in the old days when all a man had to do to be legally separated from his wife was to appear before a rabbi and request a "Get."

Aronin recalled an old story which shows it was not easy to secure a "Get" from a rabbi.

A rabbi was studying the Talmud with such intent he barely noticed the shy and distraught newcomer who had had the nerve to enter his house and disturb his study.

His head remained poked in the Talmud. Finally, he looked impatiently and inquiringly at the newcomer his eyes blazing "What do you want?"

HESITATINGLY, the newcomer mutters, "I've come, Rebbe." He wipes his brow and continues "I've come to secure a get."

"A Get!" the Rebbe bellows, slamming his book shut, arising beligerently to pace the room "The Temple has been destroyed Jews are dying . . . and you want a Get."

Amid such majestic and vehement disapproval, Aronin declared, it was no wonder that divorces were so infrequent among Jewish families. Rather than face such wrath and disapproval many a hapless husband found it easier to overlook the burnt soup, or other sources of conflict, and start the marriage anew, he said.

THE SOUTHERN Israelite's editor, Adolph Rosenberg editorially commented about publication of Jewish divorces:

"Is it the task of a Jewish paper to serve its readers only in simchas or happy times?

"True, divorces represent something extremely personal.

"But are they more personal than marriages, or births — or obituaries?

"WHAT happens now? There is a kind of sixth social dimension for divorces. Never to be mentioned in the light of day. Never to be discussed openly, except in the tone of gossip, a kind of make-believe or pretense as though there had never been a marriage to crack up in the first place. Even when the couple may have shared a home for ten, fifteen years or more. As though there were no children.

"And in this subliminal make-believe world, society has relegated the occasion into the dank atmosphere of clandestinality.

"A wholesome open-air treatment in the tradition of the free press might well be the deterrent Mr. Aronin was talking about."

New Lavry
Oratoria Slated

SAN FRANCISCO (P-O) — "Esther," a new oratorio by Marc Lavry, Israeli composer, will be given its world premiere here March 6.

A chorus of 400, including the municipal chorus and singers from San Francisco State College, will present the work, in English, at the War Memorial Opera House. Lavry will conduct the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra.

Lavry wrote the work to mark the centennial of Congregation Beth Israel, Conservative congregation currently led by Rabbi Elliot Burstein. The handsome synagogue withstood the earthquake here half a century ago, and its vaulted ceilings sheltered temporary city hall and court headquarters at that time.

ELOQUENT ZALMAN SHAZAR
SPEAKS TO HEBREW GROUP

The visitors' choice of activities this week ranges from a symposium at Herzl Institute on Wednesday evening, which takes up what Zionism has done for the Jewish religion, to an annual affair of the Hebraists in U.S.A.

Three rabbis representing the three branches in the American Jewish religious community will participate in the symposium. Rabbi Herschel Levin of Temple Beth Shalom, is the reform rabbi, Rabbi Saul Templitz of the Laurelton Jewish Center, is from the conservative rabbinate and Rabbi Zev Segal, spiritual leader of the Young Israel of Newark, J. J. is the orthodox representative.

THOSE OF you who have become surfeited with monotonous speeches at Jewish affairs, will find it different this Sunday afternoon at the annual banquet of the Histadruth Ivrit, American Hebrew Language and Culture Association, where Zalman Shazar, one of Israel's most talented speakers will deliver the guest address.

The dinner will also be converted into a tribute to the guest speaker on the occasion of his 70th birthday. Large numbers of friends and admirers of the Israeli leader are expected to join in paying homage to the treasurer of the Jewish Agency.

DEDICATED to the Herzl Centennial Year, marking the 100th birthday of the founder of modern Zionism, the banquet will be attended by some 800 American Hebraists and Zionist leaders from the metropolitan area and adjacent communities. Proceeds of the banquet will go toward financing the activities and projects of the Histadruth Ivrit.

Senator Herbert H. Lehman and Senator Jacob K. Javits have accepted as Honorary Sponsors for the dinner Honorary Chairman include Dr. Nahum Goldmann, chairman of the Jewish Agency; Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver of Cleveland, and leaders of all wings of American Zionist movement as well as noted educators. Abraham Redelheim, president of ZOA is chairman of the dinner committee and Harold W. Carmely, a VIP of the ZOA heads the arrangement committee.

At the Hebrew Union College Jewish Institute of Religion, on Tuesday night, Dr. Nelson Glueck, President of the Reform College-Institute, will confer the degree at Founders' Day services.

In recognition of his many outstanding contributions to America's religious and civic life, Rabbi Theodore S. Ross, spiritual leader of Temple Sinai, Forest Hill, L. I., will be awarded the honorary Doctor of Divinity degree by HUC-JIR.

Rabbi Ross, founding rabbi of Temple Sinai, is a former president of the Association of Reform Rabbis of New York City. Before coming to Queens in 1952, he served South Shore Cong. in Chicago. He is also the observer at the United Nations for the Central Conference of American Rabbis.

Piccolo Theatre Is Diverting Evening

Theatregoers who have become weary of today's stagecraft might profit from a visit to the New York City Center. There they will find the activities of the Piccolo Teatro di Milano, — according to all of New York's stage critics — enjoyable and worth seeing.

"The Servant of Two Masters" is an 18th Century farce with which Italy's famed Piccolo di Milano opened a two-week engagement at City Center.

Herald Tribune: "If you care anything at all about the origins of comedy, it's a feast."

Times: "Not only edifying, but also amusing . . . Although Piccolo Teatro means small theatre it's accomplishments are high."

News: "The Comedians from Milan . . . are unpretentious and charming."

Mirror: "A joyous frolic."
World Telegram: "An able and amiable company esthetically and honestly buoyant."

SPECIAL FOLDING TABLES BY HOWE ARE SELLING AIDE

A group of new, specially-shaped folding tables that can be arranged in set-ups so interesting they make banquet, wedding and other private party facilities easier for synagogues to sell has been developed by Howe Folding Furniture, Inc.

AVAILABLE in three shapes — crescent, quarter-round and half-moon — these Howe tables can be combined with each other or with Howe oblong folding tables; the number of different set-ups that can be arranged is said to be limited only by the user's imagination.

Howe crescents, for instance, can be used to form a "doughnut," a "horseshoe," a serpentine shape and a variety of long ovals.

Some of the arrangements possible with Howe quarter-rounds and a few oblongs are open squares with rounded corners, oblongs with rounded or semi-rounded corners and U-shaped.

HOWE half-moons can be combined into a complete, compact oval, a semi-serpentine shape.

open or closed oblongs and many other interesting forms.

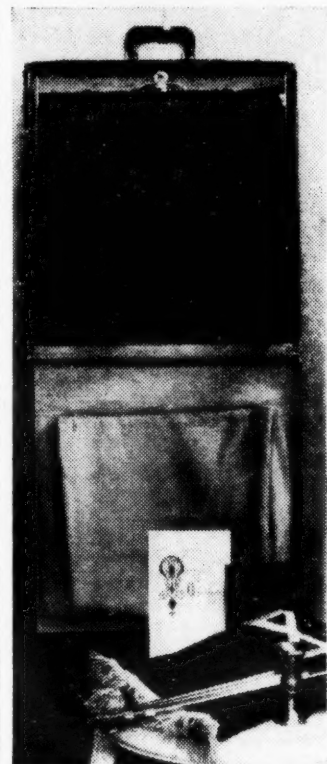

Used primarily for buffet set-ups, these tables also lend themselves to seated service.

These specially-shaped folding tables have the following features characteristic of Howe tables:

- 1) Riveted and welded, high-grade carbon steel-angle iron chassis.
- 2) Welded tubular steel legs, 1½ inches square, are individually locked and corner-braced; brace ends are riveted to the tables' steel leg at one end, the steel chassis at the other. Legs are positioned to insure maximum table stability. Glider leg caps protect carpeting and flooring.

ONE-PIECE solid tops are made of Douglas Fir plywood and have aluminum moldings. Standard heights are 30, 29 and 28 inches. Each table supports up to 2,000 pounds.

A portable chupa set for use by rabbis and cantors has been developed by the J. Levine Co. The set features a black case which holds a canopy and collapsible poles, a clergy gown, kiddush cup and a glass to be broken in remembrance of the Temple's destruction. Marriage manual and certificates are optional. For more information circle 247 on Service Department Coupon A.

WHAT FOODS THESE MORSELS BE

Reasonably Intelligent Housewives Look Ahead To Purim

By SARAH LIEBER

Time to get busy on the Purim preparations. I'm sure you've done a good deal of shopping for the children's parties already. You can bake some cookies well in advance. If you're really far-sighted, you might bake strudel and Hamantashen and freeze them. No matter what large quantities I prepare, there never seems to be quite enough. It's the custom in my neighborhood to exchange plates and baskets of Shal Achmonos with friends. And of course, variety is always desirable, so we let our imaginations run free for unusual fillings and forms for these goodies. Below are some suggestions for your own baking.

- MOHN COOKIES
- 1/2 cup sugar
 - 2 cups all purpose flour
 - 1/2 tsp. salt
 - 1 tsp. baking powder
 - 1/3 cup poppyseeds
 - 2 eggs
 - 1/2 cup cooking oil or melted parve margarine
 - 1 tblsp. grated orange rind
- Sift together the flour, salt, sugar and baking powder. Sift again into a large bowl. Stir in the poppyseeds. Make a well in the center and drop in the slightly beaten eggs, and oil. Stir from the center outward until a thick drop batter is formed. Drop by teaspoonfuls on an ungreased cookie sheet, about one and a half inches apart to allow for spreading. Dip the bottom of a small glass in sugar and press each cookie down to make a thin cookie. Bake 10 minutes at 400 degrees or until browned on the edges. These store well.
- POPPY SEED TEA BREAD
- 3 cups sifted all purpose flour
 - 3 1/2 tsps. double acting making powder

- 1 tsp. salt
 - 1/3 cup poppyseeds
 - 3/4 cup sugar
 - 2 tblsps. shortening
 - 2 eggs
 - 1 tsp. grated lemon rind
 - 1 1/3 cups milk
- Sift together the flour, salt and baking powder. Mix in poppyseeds. Beat the sugar, shortening and eggs together. Add grated lemon rind. Add the dry ingredients alternately with the milk. Blend thoroughly. Turn into a well greased and lightly floured loaf pan 9x5x3 inches. Bake one hour in a pre-heated 350 degree oven or until browned. Let stand several hours or overnight before slicing. Good with cream cheese, jam or butter.

 - 4 eggs, slightly beaten
 - 2 tblsps. oil
 - 2 cups honey
 - 1/4 lb. poppyseeds
- Mix together flour, sugar, eggs and oil. Knead until smooth, about 5 minutes. Roll out to 1/4 inch thickness on a lightly floured board. Cut into 2 inch squares. Fold over into triangles and prick the tops with a fork. Bake about 15 minutes at 350 degrees or until lightly browned. Heat the honey to the boiling point and drop the cookies in, stirring constantly. After 3 minutes of cooking, add the poppyseeds. Stir constantly and cook until a rich brown color. Sprinkle with 2 tablespoonfuls of cold water, stir well. Remove from the heat.

Place on a well greased platter. Separate the cookies with wet hands. Chill. Store between layers of waxed paper. Do not keep longer than one week.

 - 1 cup sour cream
 - 2 egg yolks
 - 2 cups flour
 - 1/2 tsp. salt
- Mix all the ingredients together. Shape into small balls of dough and chill two hours in refrigerator. Roll out between sheets of waxed paper. Spread filling (recipe below) on half of each round of pastry. Fold over to form triangle. Brush edges with water, and press together to seal. Bake 12 to 15 minutes at 350 degrees or until brown.
- FILLING:
- 1/2 cup chopped nuts
 - 1/2 cup sugar
 - 1/2 cup honey
- Mix together. If too thin add some cracker meal or cake crumbs as a binder. Use as filling.

- TAIGLACH

 - pinch of salt
 - 1 tsp. baking powder

 - 1 tsp. powdered ginger
 - 1/2 tsp. nutmeg
 - 2 cups filberts or unblanched almonds
 - 1/2 cup candied cherries
- Sift the flour, salt and baking powder into a bowl. Make a well in the center and drop eggs and oil into it. Work into the flour and mix until dough is formed. Break off pieces of dough and form into pencil thick strips. Cut into 1/2 inch pieces and place on a lightly greased cookie sheet. Bake 20 minutes or until browned at 350 degrees. Cool. Cook the honey, brown sugar and spices together for 15 minutes. Drop the cookies into it and continue cooking for 5 minutes. Add the nuts and cook 10 minutes longer, stirring frequently. Test the mixture by dropping a small amount on a wet board. If it holds together, it is done. If not, continue cooking. Turn out onto a wet board and let cool until it can be handled easily. Then, shape into 3 inch balls between wet hands. Add candied cherries for garnish. Let cool. Store in a dry place.

THE WOMEN'S VIEWPOINT

ARE THREE RING CIRCUS WEDDINGS NECESSARY?

By HELEN COHEN

I wonder that the editor last week was not more impressed by the coincidence of his two releases from London. In one a British writer accuses the American Jew of desiring above all the life of quiet respectability "innocuous and inoffensive — with well behaved children and no wish to recall to anyone the thunder of the prophets." And in the second release another British writer accuses British Jewry of being concerned only with materialism and familism — their children — "with little respect for the creative person."

The pot calling the kettle black.

SPEAKING of British Jewry, Ben Azai in his column in the February 12 London Jewish Chronicle says: "In a pathetic, reckless way, much intermarriage (in Britain) may be a protest against the standards which prevail in marital matters, and many a fellow for whom Wembley Town Hall would scarcely have been large enough, had he married a coreligionist, winds up fairly happily with a cup of tea and a pastry after a Register Office ceremony."

Since almost all of the financial burden of a wedding is borne by the bride's parents, Azai must be referring to the young man's attitude to all the fuss and bother that go into a large affair. Are they actually so opposed to the idea? We could check here in America also to see if our prospective grooms are of the same mind as their British brethren.

THERE HAS BEEN some thoughtful discussion lately, in the non-Jewish as well as the Jewish community, on the dangers of turning the sacred ceremony into a giant three ring circus with its outlandish expenditures — in some cases way beyond the parents' income.

Personally I would like to see the occasion dictated along the lines of sensible good taste. I have to bear in mind—how can I forget — that in good time we hope to lead under the chuppa each of our five daughters (the three sons we'll let the bride's mother worry about.)

of Israel's constituency election system.

The head of the Circle for Election Reform composed by a group of professors and leading scientists is famed archeologist and former commander of Israel's Army, Yigael Yadin.

Yadin told a press conference last week: "We are convinced that the majority of the people of Israel, including at least 60 Knesset members, are in favor of changing the present election system."

Yadin said that a government elected under the present system was incapable of coordinating a long-range policy.

A CHAOTIC SITUATION

We'd like an expression of the view of the American Jewish Committee, which has steadfastly opposed the establishment of anything like an overall democratic Jewish body to make decisions for the U.S. Jewish community, on the present negotiations now going on for the revision of the American Section of the Jewish Agency for Palestine.

THESE DECISIONS are vital to the American Jewish community because they affect what happens to the money we contribute each year to Jewish needs through the United Jewish Appeal.

But the negotiations are going on behind closed doors, and we'd venture a bet of the Jewish Post and its assets against the American Jewish Committee and its assets, that John Slawson and Herbert Ehrmann, executive vice president and president respectively of the AJCommittee, know less about what is going on than the writer of this editorial.

WE DON'T MIND Mr. Slawson and Mr. Ehrmann not being consulted because this is what they deserve. For their organization has prevented the emergence of an overall, democratic Jewish body in the U.S. even though time after time, as in the present instance, the need for such an agency has been overwhelmingly demonstrated.

What we have now is chaos. We have the making of important decisions by people of good intent, but without the backing of any constituency in the U.S. Jewish community. They are making what they think are the best decisions for all concerned, but if you and I ask what these decisions are, and what are the various points of views as between the negotiators, we are told that the discussions are too delicate.

THIS IS WHAT everyone says when they want to do things their own way.

So we're offering space to you Mr. Slawson or you Mr. Ehrmann to cry on the shoulders of the American Jewish community.

TWO NOW

Dr. Israel Goldstein, whom we suspect is making ready to move to Israel, speaks out firmly (P-O, Feb. 26) against Zionists who out of convenience assert that aliya to Israel should be forgotten as a plank in the Zionist platform.

DR. GOLDSTEIN should not be a lone voice, but other Zionist leaders should begin to speak out, or else let someone take over their positions.

If the Zionists of the United States had been sending a steady stream of pioneers to Israel in the past ten years, does anyone think it would have been possible for Ben-Gurion to have insulted the organizations with such impunity. In fact, Ben-Gurion would probably resign as premier, and come to the U.S. to run for the presidency of the Zionist Organization of America, if there was this strong belief and support of a successful aliya movement from the U.S. Jewish community.

WE'RE HAPPY TO see Dr. Goldstein's voice added to our own. This makes two now.

ONE IS WRONG

We don't know if the reporting was accurate, but somewhere there's a mistake.

RABBI RALPH WEISBERGER, according to the news story in the Feb. 26 issue of The POST and OPINION, told a conference in New York that in suburbia "inter-dating is very common and almost an accepted thing."

The same news story quotes Rabbi Isaac N. Trainin as supporting Rabbi Weisberger, and saying that "Taking out a Christian girl in a small community (suburbia) brands you in the eyes of your Jewish neighbors, and people do not let their daughters go out with you."

ONE OF THE two rabbis is evidently wrong.

THIRD TERM USEFUL

The presidents of the Zionist Organization of America, seeking to retain their office past the two years now given them by the constitution, have often sought third one-year terms.

THEIR POSITION was that in two years a man could barely begin to grasp the needs of the office, and more time was required if an effective job was to be done.

This made good sense. But the presidents voicing this point, always made the mistake of seeking this change so that it would apply to themselves.

IF THEY WERE to urge such a change, which has a great deal of merit to support it, for succeeding presidents, the annual convention of the ZOA would most surely approve the required constitutional amendment.

The B'nai B'rith selects its top official for a three-year term, with a second such term possible by reelection. The American Jewish Committee has by tradition given its presidents five years in office. The Council of Jewish Federations likewise. In none of these cases, we believe, are these terms set by constitutional fiat, but only by tradition.

WE THEREFORE suggest that at the next ZOA convention, a constitutional change giving the president a third one-year term, be enacted. It should take effect however with the president next to take office, not the one to be elected at this same convention.

The EDITOR'S CHAIR . . .

SOMETIME AGO Rabbi Gershon Winer, of the Baldwin (Long Island) Jewish Centre sent me a copy of his bulletin announcing a change in Friday evening services, which omitted the sermon altogether. In its place, after the services, which consisted therefore wholly of prayer, the congregation adjourned to the auditorium for a course of instruction in one of the great traditional texts—"Ethics of the Fathers."

Rabbi Winer said that there was no fanfare, no promotion campaign, and that the study was truly study with mimeographed notes to work from, and texts provided for all.

We don't know how this plan is working out, although we have an idea that it must be successful, but we'd still advise a more elemental first step.

OUR CONGREGANTS know nothing at all about the various parts of the service, what they mean, why they were accepted into our worship service, what they attempt to achieve in the relationship of the worshipper to his Maker, etc.

Some years ago we recommended that the worship service should be combined with a continuous flow of instruction, with the rabbi giving history, interpretation, background, meanings as the services went along. This is necessary, for even those who today attend regularly often don't have but a vague notion of why it is done this way, and why this is done and that, and so forth.

THIS IS THE kind of experiment we'd like to see tried. We believe the rabbi would find that he was conducting an adult education course which would soon attract all his members, and as the years go by, make his congregation a knowledgeable one Jewishly.

For the first few years, we'd conduct that course of instruction which Rabbi Winer is holding in his auditorium, right in the sanctuary. This is hardly revolutionary, as often in the old days, the rabbi mounted the bima and gave a long interpretation of a talmudic passage which held his hearers spellbound. This we remember from our childhood, even though we recall too that it was not part of the worship service.

WHILE ON THE subject of experimentation by rabbis, let me bring to your notice a project initiated by Rabbi Jordan H. Shephard, of Temple Shalom of Medford, Mass.

Rabbi Shephard last year began a correspondence course on adult Jewish education, which he calls, "Your Jewish Heritage." This is a rather forbidding title, so perhaps some one can suggest something that will be just a little more engaging.

In any event, the rabbi mailed to his congregation a two-page mimeographed sheet each week, which was quite attractive.

THE TWO SAMPLES he's sent me which are lessons 9 and 10 of series 1, take up the question of what is a mitzva, what is a tallis, why is it not worn by women, why are hard-boiled eggs served to a mourner on the first day of the shiva period, is there a biblical source for the setting up of a tombstone upon the grave, when should this be done, how long does a mourner recite the kaddish, when does he observe yahrzeit, what are the books of Writings and how are they arranged.

The lessons are filled in with wisdom from Jewish lore and Scripture, as follows:

He who does not increase his knowledge, decreases it. (Sayings of the Fathers)

If I am not for myself, who will be for me? But if I am only for myself, what am I? (Sayings of the Fathers)

The chief thing is not the creed (belief) but doing the deed. (The Fathers)

Judge not thy fellowman until thou art come into his place. (Sayings of the Fathers)

In a place where there are no men, strive to be a man. (Sayings of the Fathers)

Do not unto others what you would not have others do unto you—this is the essence of the Torah. (Talmud Sabbath)

We have an idea that while many members of a congregation might shun a series of study courses because of the mistaken idea that they would be boring, Rabbi Shephard's correspondence course will be read and studied by practically every member.

I note where Rabbi Shephard has copyrighted the series, but we're sure he'd be happy to send samples to any rabbi or lay leader who requested them. His address is 475 Winthrop St., Medford 55, Mass.

THAT WAS A MOST thoughtful gift from the Ministerial Association of Wierton, W. Va., in honor of Rabbi Nandor Marton, an ex-president of the group, to our religious items drive. As will have been noted (P-O, Feb. 16) the same group made a contribution to our fund which purchased an ambulance for the Red Mogen David, Israel's Red Cross. This also was in honor of Rabbi Marton.

Even with this boost, however, the fund doesn't seem to be making much headway.

This always confuses us, since such small amounts are asked, and because we know our readers are the bulwark of the leadership who lead the drives for funds in every local Jewish community.

SINCE FOR $300 a Sefer Torah inscribed with the name of the donor can be given for perhaps centuries of use to an Israeli colony or behind the iron curtain, it would seem that many of our readers would want to donate this amount as a testimony to some deed of one of their close friends or perhaps in honor or memory of their parents.

How else can such good be done, and even perhaps immortality won?

For $10.00 a pair of tephilin can be furnished to a Jew behind the iron curtain, where even a Jewish calendar is a collector's item, so scarce is anything Jewish.

We hope the religious item fund will begin to perk up. This is a rare mitzva which all of us ought to want to participate in.

INCIDENTALLY, we had one inquiry from the federation director of a midwestern Jewish community, some of whose leaders wanted to participate in the fund. He wanted to know if any expenses for administration or shipping or packaging would be deducted by The POST and OPINION from the amount raised.

Every penny contributed goes to the purpose for which the fund was established. In every previous drive for funds in which you readers took part, not one penny was deducted for expenses.

BOOKS

Timely Book on Ben-Gurion Released

THE STORY OF BEN-GURION, by Barnet Litvinoff, $2.95 (Oceana).

The life of the premier of Israel is well reconstructed for the young reader, who also learns the story of modern Zionism. The writer stresses his subject's socialism and his abhorrence of all military or political or economic units that opposed Mapai-Histadrut. Weizmann, Ben-Zvi, Sharett, Hos, Jabotinsky, and other famed Zionist partisans appear in these pages.

BAR MITZVAH COMPANION, edited by Sidney Greenberg and Abraham Rothberg, $4.50 (Behrman).

As a companion to the ever excellent Bar Mitzvah Treasury (Eisenberg), two highly capable editors have compiled a volume portraying "the Jewish heritage as set down in story, legend, and essay." The selections range from the earliest to contemporary literature, from the Bible to Bon-tzye, from the tannaim to offer a score of writers now living.

The latter include such diversified contributors as M. M. Kaplan, A. A. Neuman, Sam Levenson, Meyer Levin, Rufus Lears, and Maurice Samuel, Fast, Silver, and Heschel. There are single sentences or paragraphs, many by non-Jews, and long short stories, under appropriate rubrics. The format — and this includes the jacket — is admirable. A gift of both spiritual and physical value for any new Bar Mitzvah.

SAYS P-O REPORT MISLEADING

Many Collegians Take Pride In Their Jewishness: Weinberg

Editor Jewish POST and OPINION
In your issue of Feb. 19 in "Collegians Still Harbor Negative Feelings Toward Judaism," Hillel Rabbi Says, your reporter, Maxine Hochman presented an account of my discussion with her held some two or three weeks prior to publication, which resulted in a distorted and inaccurate picture of religion on the campus.

I did not say that all college students are ashamed of their religion and their parents. Let it be clearly understood that, where I suggested contributing factors toward a negative attitude to Judaism, I referred only to those minority of students who have expressed negative feelings toward Jewish religious identity and the Jewish way of living.

Needless to say, in a complex community, whether a campus or general community, it is not difficult to accentuate the extreme minority over the normal majority.

MISS HOCHMAN neglected to include the positive and affirmative, to indicate the thousands of students who are not only members of the Jewish Culture Foundation Students Organization, but who do take pride in their Jewish identity; who do "turn out for a prayer"; who do find a compatibility between Judaism and their academic studies; who do engage in interfaith activities; who do encourage, arrange for, and attend lectures and circles on subjects of Jewish cultural and religious interest; who do take courses and major in the Department of Hebrew Culture and Education and in the Department of Religion.

We were not discussing the many students who sit in classrooms proudly symbolizing their attachment to Judaism by the wearing of a "yarmulke"; or those who respond readily to our "minyan"; or those out-of-town students who requested aid in attending High Holy Day Services; or those coming up to JCF during Succot to recite the traditional blessings over the "esrog" and "lulav"; or those who subscribe to "kosher for Pesach" lunches during Chol Hamoed Pesach; or those who refused to take examinations on Saturday as against their religious scruples and have been easily accommodated by the University Administration with the help of the JCF.

AS TO THE quote about those who have received a Yeshiva education, I feel that they are best oriented because of their background and education and practice of their religion to be "real Jews."

I stated during the discussion that where Judaism is concerned, "familiarity breeds contempt, not contempt" — that the prerequisite to healthy attitudes toward Judaism is practice of its rituals, customs, and ceremonies from earliest childhood, accompanied by learning, for "the ignorant cannot be pious."

It is in this connection that I also pointed out, regarding the suburban temples, the ignorance of some of those who serve on religious affairs and religious school committees; though, in reality, these "well-meaning" individuals may be of a high secular calibre, they nevertheless, are not equipped to direct nor even influence the religious life and training in their respective communities.

IN REGARD to the Bar-Mitzva I pointed out that the last so-called religious experience many college students recall is their Bar-Mitzva reception which, in the case of the unlearned Jewish family, is anything but a celebration of a religious milestone in one's life.

RABBI JONAH WEINBERG, Director Jewish Culture Foundation New York University

Jewish Collegians Coldly Indifferent To Judaism, Kentucky Rabbi Says

Editor Jewish POST and OPINION
Maxine Hochman has done a commendable job in confusing the public regarding an issue which should be of vital concern to the American Jewish community. I refer to an entire page penned by Miss Hochman in the February 19 edition devoted to Jewish life on the American college campus. The first article, which contained the views of Rabbi Jonah Weinberg, representing the Jewish Culture Foundation, offered that our collegians "harbor negative feelings toward Judaism" and that there was little hope that this situation could be remedied at the university level. The second article consisted of a campus poll taken by her, on the basis of which she predicted the emergence of an "Intellectual Judaism." Surely, your readers are entitled to a less bewildering evaluation of the college scene.

IN TRUTH, neither of the above appraisals are broadly characteristic of Jewish life on the campus. Rabbi Weinberg charges that our Jewish collegians possess negative feelings, bordering on self hate. Factually the vast majority of Jewish students are coldly indifferent to Judaism. They are unconcerned, nonchalant and neutral regarding Jewish values. Most of them are not "young Jews who are sorry that they have been born into Judaism," as Rabbi Weinberg would have you believe, rather they simply do not care whether one considers them in the Jewish camp or not. They are passive to attempts to reintroduce them into the main stream of Jewish life, but they are not irreligious zealots. This distinction may seem like Talmudic hair splitting, however, such discrimination will allow for a proper approach to the problem.

CERTAINLY the solution to this knotty issue does not lie within the policy framework of the Jewish Culture Foundation, which, in functioning on the college campus, does not "concentrate on any specific doctrine in their activities" for fear that "if the emphasis were put on religion" then they "would not have a turnout" of Jewish students. Programming for "crowds" dilutes the effectiveness of any effort to bring these collegians back into the fold. This is especially true if activities are void of Jewish content. Why should we fear that the same students who are imbuing with gusto, the waters of foreign ideologies and philosophies in college courses will find no spiritual refreshment in the wells of living Judaism? Our campus activities in behalf of the Jewish students must not be relegated to the sponsoring of dances and coffee clutches which we justify because it "enables Jewish boys and girls to get together." Even at the expense of reaching fewer students, let us offer them a Jewish program with substance.

AS TO Maxine Hochman's view that a "new Judaism" is being born on campus, it certainly is without foundation. Her implication that a movement is underfoot "conceived in the mind of young intellectuals" who are revamping Judaism "at discussions around the tables in college cafeterias everywhere" is misleading, and is not representative of all of Jewish students life.

Sapiro's Son Defends Father's Memory

Editor Jewish POST and OPINION
I recently read your Jan. 22, edition in which your editor made certain petty insinuations relative to the death of my father, Aaron Sapiro. Evidently even the men with the muck-rake find it easier to attack the dead than those who can defend themselves.

The article states that: "We noted that there was no Jewish funeral." It so happens that my father, who underwent torture from an extreme case of arthritis for ten years prior to his death, left his body to U.C.L.A. Medical Center for study of arthritis. He was hopeful that in death he might do a little in the war against this terrible disease. If he had held more regard for his own person, and less for humanity, I am certain he would have had a proper "Jewish funeral."

Your editor insinuated that perhaps his failure to have a religious funeral was because he felt that "he was not properly rewarded" for his activities on behalf of the Jewish people. He always felt fully rewarded by the Ford apology to the Jews, Ford's promise to stop his anti-Semitic attacks, and the closing down of the Dearborn Independent. You may not know it, but he turned down a check for ONE MILLION DOLLARS WHICH WAS OFFERED AS AN ALTERNATIVE TO THE APOLOGY! He turned this down, although the trial left him almost without funds. The last thing he was seeking was a financial reward.

Most of your editorial consisted of a rather stupid complaint by a Brooklyn rabbi that my father refused to wear a hat in his synagogue. I have no way of knowing if this really happened, but it might well have. My father was always contemptuous of the little minds who felt that the trappings of ritual are more important matters than truth and justice.

The character of the Brooklyn rabbi can be judged by the fact that the only effect that my father's death had upon him was to renew an ancient bitterness over the wearing of a skullcap. I wonder what great historical contribution to the defense of the Jewish people that rabbi will make.

Browdy's Comment Hit By Israeli

Editor Jewish POST and OPINION
A member of our association brought a letter published in your newspaper on Feb. 5, 1960 and written by Mr. Benjamin Browdy, to my attention.

I must say that we here in Israel are also very disappointed with the fact that organizations make pronouncements and then cannot fulfill them. Mr. Browdy, I'm sure, will be pleased to know that if he is keen on assisting American aliyah, that our Association has a program into which he can invest his Israeli bonds. The monies will be used for investment in mortgages to provide housing for American and Canadian Aliyah. I would appreciate it if you would ask Mr. Browdy if his letter is written only because he wants to point out that the Z.O.A. continues to repeat promises that are not kept, or whether he wishes to join with us, and not worry about broken pledges.

MID-EAST CALMS DOWN

Globe-Trotting By Key Israelis Indicates No Immediate Danger

By CHARLES GAMZEY

With war clouds hanging over the Middle East, it is no coincidence that Israel's key men are joining Soviet Premier Khrushchev and President Eisenhower in globe-trotting.

Prime Minister Ben-Gurion is coming to the U.S. in a few days and General Moshe Dayan is already here speaking before an assortment of Israel bond dinners. Abba Eban was in London during Nasser's saber-rattling and is headed for Scandinavia. Troubleshooter Shimon Peres, Director General of the Defense Ministry is touring Paris and London. In the Negev, General Haim Laskov, Israel Chief of Staff is pointedly going through routine military exercises.

THAT BEN-GURION has sent these three key men abroad and then go to Waltham, Mass. to pick up a honorary doctorate at this time is significant, the Jewish Observer and Middle East Review of London reports. The trips indicate that the Mid-East is cooling off.

Israelis feel that nothing very important is going to happen with the U.A.R. in the next few weeks. Nasser is too realistic to really believe himself what he tells the street mobs in Cairo and Damascus about Arab military superiority over the Israelis.

The immediate danger, Israeli officials fear, is the effects in Western capitals of his violent anti-Israel speeches in Damascus and his notable self-assurance in Damascus last week, the London paper reports.

ALTHOUGH obviously neither vitriolic speeches or stirred up street mobs or going to win anything, Nasser has created a "mob atmosphere" in Syria which expects the Syrian Army any day to move on Israel and demolish her.

Israelis have only one fear about Nasser's actions in the last few weeks: What if he begins to play the role in earnest which the Damascus street mobs have set out for him. But the Israelis despite all the strong talk and alleged troop movements in the Gaza Strip feel that Nasser won't risk overt action despite his street mob image. He just knows too much about Israel's deterrent strength.

IF ISRAEL was militarily weak or was alone diplomatically, Nasser would have set the Middle East aflame in recent weeks. War would have been inevitable. But since neither situation prevails, the prospects for peace seems highly promising despite menacing headlines about troop movements.

Dayan forcefully expressed the sentiment of all Israelis when he told a Miami Beach dinner: "If the Arabs start war now, I have no doubt that they would lose."

Survey Indicates

Jewish Children, Teachers Hurt By Absence During Holy Days

By ALFRED K. AHAN

NEW YORK (P.O.) — The recent decision by New York City's Supt. of Schools to close New York public schools on Rosh Hashana and Yom Kippur may have far-reaching implications in other cities.

The Office of Research and Curriculum of the St. Paul, Minnesota public schools conducted a survey in which they sent questionnaires to the superintendents of schools in cities of over 200,000 population and asked them about their "rules and regulations regarding religious holidays."

"About half of the replies mentioned that children are permitted to be absent from school on religious holidays," the survey was informed.

"One school allows one day's absence per semester for religious holidays," the survey further disclosed. Three cities said that no examinations or tests were given on Jewish holidays.

Some fifteen school systems in various parts of the country replied to the St. Paul survey with information on the matter of teachers taking off for their important religious holidays. "One city school system must by law excuse employees of any faith with pay on religious holidays when and if the employees make the request. At the other extreme, four school systems allow absence by teachers, but they lose their complete pay, while three others receive their pay less what it costs for a substitute.

Forty-five per cent of the teachers in one city stay out of school on the Jewish high holidays, thus creating a serious problem in administration."

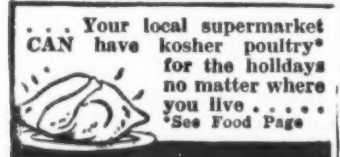

The survey indicates that, in all too many instances, Jewish children and Jewish teachers are being penalized and inconvenienced simply for observing their faith.

Palestine Refugee Army Planned

Jordan is forming a Palestine army from the ranks of the refugees. One division of 30,000 men would be placed on the west bank of the Jordan. Another division would be organized in the Gaza Strip.

The New York Times reports that the United Arab republic has agreed to equip the forces on Jordanian soil if Jordan can not do so.

Realistic Arabs no doubt agree.

If Ben-Gurion meets President Eisenhower in Washington after picking up his diploma, he is expected to tell Eisenhower that Israel does not need or want the U.S. to pursue an anti-Arab course but also that Israel's rights must be respected.

THE JEWISH Observer and Middle East Review says that it is in London, Paris and Washington that the key to continued Middle East tranquility is to be found. Thus the significance to Dayan and Ben-Gurion's trip to the U.S. and Peres' and Eban's tourism in European capitals.

DIGEST OF THE YIDDISH PRESS

Parents Hostility Turned Ed Wynn Away From Judaism

By RABBI SAMUEL SILVER

No doubt many people regard Ed Wynn, the comedian, as a Jew. Actually he had but one Jewish parent, and he had neither training nor interest in Jewishness. So indifferent was he that he had no objection whatsoever to his wife's rearing their son, Kennan, as a Catholic. In his recent autobiography, reviewed by N. Zolowitz, in the Forward, Keenan hints that his mother's hostility to his father, which ultimately led to divorce, was prompted by the fact that Ed, her husband, and Keenan, her son, albeit neither was Jewish, still looked too Jewish. Keenan remembers his mother once crying out, "You've got your father's Jewish look!"
